

ABSTRACT

A system and method for processing human language input uses collocation information for the language that is not limited to N-gram information for N no greater than a predetermined value. The input is preferably speech input. The system and 5 method preferably recognize at least a portion of the input based on the collocation information.

10060031.015802